

There are 8 species of swans in the world.
ONE occurs only in North America.

This magnificent bird faces threats today.
Help us insure the recovery of this treasured
North American species.

Trumpeter Swans:

- * Embody grace, beauty and unspoiled wilderness
- * Inspire humans to cherish wildlife
- * Remind us we can save and restore a species
- * Benefit, through habitat protection, a host of other species

Did you know?

Trumpeter Swans historically:

- * Flourished over much of North America
- * Were hunted to near extinction
- * Survived only in remote wilderness areas

Today, they:

- * Exist as one of our rarest native birds, still absent from much of their historic range
- * Still face threats from habitat destruction, loss of historic migration patterns, lead poisoning, climate change and increasing human development
- * Challenge us to secure their future through habitat protection and restoration

If you thrill to the sight and sound of

The Trumpeter Swan - a symbol of HOPE

Now on the Road to RECOVERY...

In this rapidly changing world, Trumpeter Swans are vulnerable. A severe winter or disease outbreak could seriously damage entire populations. We need your help today to make their populations secure.

The Trumpeter Swan Society (TTSS)

We work to make them secure.

We are the ONE conservation organization directly focused on helping this majestic species. We have knowledge, continent-wide vision and commitment. We identify threats and solve critical problems.

For over 40 years TTSS has played an important role in virtually every restoration program and significant management decision affecting swans.

We have charted the course for Trumpeter Swans to begin a wonderful recovery. Throughout their range, they are seen as an emblem of healthy wetlands.

With your help we can expand our vital efforts.
